Across the Moon.

The wild winds are sweeping
Across the bleak and barren moor,
And rolling waves of withered leaves
With sadness dash against my door.

Dark clouds of shades are gathering
Within the room, a mystic throng,
And now I gauded sit there drowsy
With words of some old song.

Phenomena Earth are flickering
With sombre and fitful glare,
And I bade me lowly crouch
And spread the curtains of my bair.

Thus by the light of evening
I sit on my chamber floor,
And listen ever for the sound
Of some one coming to the door.

Low, low have I been waiting
With patient love and trusting care,
But I never see his form, nor hear
His heavy footstep on the stair.

For years have I been listening,
And building nightly cheerful bair;
But comes not, and one by one
Each bright and flaming brand expires.

But still rest eve I'm fitting
In some quiet, quiet place,
And thoughtfully, with fingers cold,
Threading the dark lengths of my hair.

And the winds of war sweep away
From the world's black mists apart,
Rolling the withered leaves of life.
Round the pale wrists of my heart.

And troops of shades there gather
From the ghoul-haunt of the past,
And they softly sing all the sad old songs
That are sung when I hear them last.

Are the fitful flames are dying
In the watchful eyes of my bair,
And when my waiting eyes watching o'er,
I shall tell my hands to sleep.

Movements of General Scott in Europe.

The late Lieutenant General of the United States army, the brave General Scott, arrived in our city yesterday by the steamer Arago, and proceeded to the Hotel de l'Europe.

Previous to his leaving New York, the fortunate conqueror of Mexico was the object of the most flattering distinction.

The Chamber of Commerce of New York passed resolutions, in which they joined with the entire nation in esteem of the great Virginia citizen.

We observed, with pleasure, that the American Captains now in our harbor, improved on board the Arago a kind of triumphal arch, decked with flags in honor of General Scott.

To day at half past nine o'clock, in the morning, the same Captains assembled in the court of the Hotel de l'Europe, and preceded by Captain Lines, commander of the trans-Atlantic steamer Arago, went arm in arm to the apartments of the brave veteran of the federal army. Each successively pressed his hand with emotion. A little while after the General addressed them as follows:

MY KIND FRIENDS AND DEAR FELLOWS COUNTRYMEN. I thank you profoundly for this demonstration. My heart is deeply touched. I am always happy to find myself among my fellow citizens of the United States, but the circumstances under which this visit takes place renders me doubly happy. I am proud to receive your good wishes in a foreign land, thousands of miles from our common country.

I love, among all, your profession; and I take this opportunity, which you have offered me, to assure you of my entire devotion to the cause of my dear country. I am convinced these are your feelings. Once more, my friends, let me thank you very sincerely for this spontaneous proof of your friendship for an old Soldier of our glorious America.

May God bless you all. Fare well, my dear friends.

The General, who has come to Havre with his daughter, his son-in-law and little grandson, left by the eleven o'clock train for Paris, where he will be met by his wife, who stays at the Hotel de Rivoli.

In consequence of the arrival of General Scott and the news of the late success of the federal fleet, the American vesels in port hoisted their national colors.

The War Fever in Canada.

The hostile attitude of Great Britain respecting the Trent affair is received with an unaccountable joy in Canada. The people of that province seem to have caught the war fever in its most virulent form, and lately the news from the scenes of bloody warfare. It is remarkable that the journals most bitter in their attacks upon the "Yankees" are the ministerial ones in the interest and pay of the government, and it is they who all along have been foremost in this bad work of creating ill-will toward the national cause among the prejudiced and ignorant people of Upper Canada.

The latest Canada papers which have reached us are filled with calls for volunteers to turn out, and militiamen to arm and equip. The provincials in a ferment, and those most zealous newspapers were to be heated, while others were cool and close at hand. As we said, the excitement rather than the prospect, and it is scarcely to be hoped that if a war does ensue, the inhabitants of Upper Canada will have plenty of it. Making due allowance for the small jealousy which has always prevailed in Canada at the superior prosperity of the Americans, and the influence of the government influences that are undoubtedly at work, we really cannot account for the passion and hate expressed toward this nation in the hour of its great peril and trial. The "whirlwind of time" brings its revenge, and that nation is only at the beginning of its career. We may better believe now, we are ultimately victorious, and Canada will do well to remember it in the world.

New York, December 17.—The Constitution, which arrived here yesterday, left at Ship island a large body of troops; her splendid rifled long range guns, and six fine live boats. On the day the Constitution sailed from Ship island, a naval engagement took place within sight, and quite near the island, between the United States gunboat New London and the steamer De Soto and two rebel armed vessels, the Pamlico and California, which were attempting to run the gauntlet from New Orleans to Mobile. Nobody was hurt on either side.

BLOOD PILLS AND BLOOD PURIFIER.

THE CONFISCATION BILL.—The bill of Senator Trumbull, of Illinois, provides for the absolute forfeiture of all property of rebels who lie beyond the reach of judicial process.—

The property is insurrectionary districts is to be seized and appropriated by military powers. That in the districts where it can be reached by legal process is to be confiscated through the courts. The proceeds, after the payment of the expenses and just claims of loyal creditors, are to be applied to reimbursing loyal citizens despoiled of their property by rebels, and the balance to paying the expense of suppressing insurrection. The rebels owners of slaves are to forfeit their right to them, and the negroes are to become free. The President is to provide for their colonization, if willing to go, in some tropical country where they will have the protection of the government.

The evidence in the possession of Dr. Robacek, which is at full times accessible to the public, establish the following:
